Deputy Head's Message

As Deputy Head and Registrar, I am pleased to present the 2009-10 Departmental Performance Report of the Registry of the Specific Claims Tribunal of Canada.

The Registry of the Specific Claims Tribunal has responsibility for provision of services for the effective administration of the Specific Claims Tribunal. The mandate of the Specific Claims Tribunal is to adjudicate the specific claims of First Nations fairly and efficiently. On November 27, 2009, an interim Tribunal of three provincial superior court judges was appointed for a period of one year. This Tribunal will prepare for the conduct of hearings, including development of Tribunal Rules of Practice and Procedure.

The Registry of the Specific Claims Tribunal has a critical role to play in the success of the Tribunal and has been mindful of this in its development of core infrastructure and services during 2009-2010. The Registry is responsible for the effective, transparent, and accountable use of public resources and for reporting on planning and performance through instruments such as the Main Estimates and Report on Plans and Priorities. Close attention to financial stewardship resulted in operating expenditures falling well within the Registry's allocation.

Careful attention has been paid to human resources and business planning. Many key corporate policies have been established and core corporate management positions have been staffed. Renovations have been completed on Registry and Tribunal office space and a Multipurpose Tribunal Room has been built to serve as the electronic hub for Tribunal proceedings. This room incorporates a number of First Nations' cultural symbols and is designed to support the culturally sensitive hearings envisioned in the legislation.

The Registry has kept up-to-date on national and international court administration best practices, with a particular focus on advances in electronic administration and case management. It is working to create an electronic registry and case management system and an electronic court which will serve its clients well and contribute directly to accessibility and ease of use by users, efficiency, cost effectiveness, and transparency.

The Registry has established a Website and information materials to inform Canadians of the mandate and activities of the Specific Claims Tribunal. The Registry recognizes the importance of good communications and collaboration with stakeholders. In the months ahead, it will continue to work with key partners to help ensure that processes and procedures established for the Tribunal will be effective in meeting the objective of timely and just resolution of specific claims. As part of this commitment, the Registry will support the work of the interim Specific Claims Tribunal as it develops Rules of Practice and Procedure to guide Tribunal case management and hearing processes. We are very much looking forward to the work ahead and to the day when the Tribunal will begin to hear its first cases.

Deputy Head and Registrar

Section I – Departmental Overview

Raison d’être and Responsibilities

October 16, 2009, marked the one-year anniversary of the coming into force of the Specific Claims Tribunal Act, the legislation that created the Specific Claims Tribunal and the Registry of the Specific Claims Tribunal of Canada.

The Specific Claims Tribunal is an adjudicative body with the express mandate of deciding First Nations’ specific claims including claims related to non-fulfillment of treaties, fraud, illegal leases and dispositions of land, or inadequate compensation for reserve lands or other assets. The Registry is responsible for management of the administrative affairs of the Specific Claims Tribunal and exercises oversight over the use of all human and financial resources.

The timely resolution of specific claims related to longstanding grievances of First Nations will contribute to reconciliation and strengthened relationships between the Government of Canada and First Nations and between First Nations and all Canadians. Monetary compensation to successful claimants will provide First Nations with capital for investment in their communities.

The Registry will be responsible for managing the processing of claims including: intake and tracking of submitted claims; managing the logistics of proceedings (including scheduling of proceedings); processing warrants, subpoenas, and writs; managing information and records; and providing services to the public in both official languages. These services support the independent resolution of claims fairly, without delay, and with an efficient, effective, and economic application of resources. The Registry must exercise these functions in a manner that protects the administrative and adjudicative independence of the Specific Claims Tribunal. Independence is central to the role of the Specific Claims Tribunal and its ability to resolve claims fairly.

Although the Registry’s offices are located in Ottawa, it provides services to Tribunal Members, First Nations, the Crown, and the public throughout Canada.

Strategic Outcome and Program Activity Architecture (PAA)

The sole strategic outcome for the Registry, as approved by Treasury Board, is the efficient administration of the Specific Claims Tribunal.

This outcome provides long-term benefit for Canadians through the efficient and effective resolution of outstanding specific claims. The resolution of First Nations claims contributes to reconciliation and improved relationships between First Nations and the Government of Canada and between First Nations and the broader Canadian public. The efficient operation of the Tribunal will create value for Canadians by saving costs associated with traditional litigation and negotiation. Monetary compensation to successful claimants will provide First Nations with capital that may then be invested in their communities, contributing to the prosperity of First Nations in Canada.

Risk Analysis

The creation of a new Tribunal with a unique and specialized mandate presents certain challenges and opportunities. In order to minimize the time required for the Tribunal to become fully operational, it was necessary to establish certain core Registry policies, functions, structures, and staff positions and to create offices and a Multipurpose Tribunal Room in advance of creation of Rules of Practice and Procedure by the Tribunal and decisions by the Tribunal which may affect location and conduct of specific claims hearings.

The 2009-10 Report on Plans and Priorities identified a potential for substantial delays in both the renovation of the office space (including the culturally sensitive Multipurpose Room) and the implementation of an electronic registry. Through effective planning and the use of tendered contracts with qualified service providers, the renovations were done on time and within budget. A strategy for the creation of an electronic registry and case management system was developed and contractors identified. This work will be completed once the Tribunal's Rules of Practice and Procedure have been established.

Staffing of qualified employees to meet the operational needs of a small organization with special needs and specialized skill requirements has been a major challenge. This challenge has been met through careful planning and recruitment and through the implementation of orientation, knowledge transfer, and training and development strategies. The Registry has staffed a number of key positions, and the remainder of the positions will be staffed in the year ahead. Recruitment will continue to take into account the need for qualified employees with the commitment and knowledge required to carry out the highly specialized work of the Registry in a culturally sensitive manner. Cross training will be a priority to ensure adequate cover-off despite small staff size in the event of unanticipated or challenging circumstances. The Registry will also continue to rely on service agreements with other organizations, where feasible, to obtain expertise and support in key corporate areas such as human resources.

It is not possible for the Registry to predict with any degree of certainty the number of specific claims it will be asked to address in its first years of operation. Claims will be brought to the Tribunal on the initiative of First Nations and there are other avenues that they may use for redress. If operational capacity and availability of Tribunal Members does not match the number of claims received, there could be consequences for timeliness of resolution of claims (in the event of a larger than anticipated caseload) or unnecessary capacity and expenditure of resources (in the event of a smaller than anticipated caseload). In order to manage this risk as much as possible, the Registry is monitoring the progress of claims in the Specific Claims process (identifying the numbers of claims that might become eligible for submission to the Tribunal as well as those already known to be eligible); it is also taking into account additional information provided by stakeholders.

The 2009-10 Report on Plans and Priorities identified a risk that either the Government of Canada or First Nations participants could come to view the Tribunal as not sufficiently independent of the parties appearing before it. The Registry has been careful to consistently operate "at arm's length" from the parties while, at the same time, ensuring transparency and keeping interested parties fully informed about Tribunal activities through its Website, meetings, and other initiatives.

A final risk identified in the 2009-10 Report on Plans and Priorities was that the Rules of Practice and Procedure may not meet the needs of either the Crown or First Nations, prove inefficient, or not result in quick resolution of claims. To mitigate this risk, the Registry conducted research to support the Tribunal in its development of the Rules of Practice and Procedure (for example, information on treatment of oral evidence, rules and best practices of other adjudicative bodies). The Tribunal will be seeking feedback from interested parties as it moves forward in the development of the Tribunal Rules of Practice and Procedure. Direct input from the parties will be a key factor in mitigating this risk.

In November 2009, an interim Tribunal was appointed for one year and tasked with specific outcomes including development of the Rules of Practice and Procedure and analysis on how best to configure the Tribunal (number and location of Tribunal Members, part-time or full-time status). As the Tribunal makes decisions respecting processes and requirements, the Registry will need to respond and adapt to these, working within budgetary and other constraints. In 2009-10, timelines for the completion of staffing were adjusted in recognition that the job descriptions and qualifications for a number of Registry Services positions would need to be aligned with Tribunal decisions respecting process and, therefore, could be finalized only after these decisions have been made. Decisions respecting case management and the conduct of hearings by Tribunal Members have a direct impact on services required from the Registry and the policies and procedures that need to be put in place to support these.

Having a very minimal staff during the start-up of the Registry made it essential to prioritize work and manage workloads carefully. In the year ahead, the Registry will need to carefully assess the adequacy of resources available to meet ongoing Tribunal operational requirements, requirements for prudent governance and administration, and staff well-being.

Benefits for Canadians

Canada’s Performance 2006 is divided into four key policy areas: economic, social, international, and government affairs. The Registry supports the Specific Claims Tribunal, whose existence is a visible sign of the mutual commitment of the Government of Canada and First Nations to work together to resolve issues in an environment which respects the cultures, perspectives, and histories of participants. The Registry’s strategic outcome is aligned with Social Affairs: A Vibrant Canadian Culture and Heritage.

The work of the Registry and the Specific Claims Tribunal will provide long-term benefits for Canadians through the efficient and effective resolution of outstanding specific claims across Canada. The Tribunal will serve as an alternative to often costly litigation and negotiation. Monetary compensation for certain First Nation losses will provide First Nations with capital for investment in their communities, contributing to the prosperity of First Nations in Canada.

Resolution of specific claims creates certainty for participants and supports reconciliation. Strengthened relations between First Nations and the Government of Canada and between First Nations and the Canadian public at large improve communications, reduce conflict, and increase opportunities for collaboration and mutual support.

Performance Analysis

The Registry’s primary objective in 2009 – 2010 was to establish the core infrastructure and services needed for ongoing Tribunal operations. Careful attention was paid to human resources and business planning. Many key corporate policies were established and core corporate management positions were staffed. Work was completed on Registry and Tribunal office space and a Multipurpose Tribunal Room was built to serve as the electronic hub for Tribunal proceedings. This room incorporates a number of First Nations’ cultural symbols and is designed to support the culturally sensitive hearings envisioned in the legislation.

Staffing was a priority. By the end of the reporting period, the Registry had classified and staffed key corporate management positions and was preparing to staff a number of the remaining positions.

Corporate support positions will be staffed early in the next reporting period. Registry Services positions will be staffed once the Rules of Practice and Procedure are finalized and job descriptions have been completed. Aboriginal perspectives and culture have been identified as an organizational need.

The Registry did initial business planning for the effective, transparent, and accountable use of public resources and completed Main Estimates, the Report on Plans and Priorities, and internal financial policies and procedures. Close attention to financial accountability and stewardship resulted in operating expenditures falling well within the Registry's allocation.

As part of its strategic planning, the Registry participated in a number of court technology and court administration conferences to get up-to-date information on international court administration best practices and on advances in electronic administration and case management which could be applied to meet the special requirements of the Tribunal. A reliable and cost effective case management system was selected. The Registry contracted for the development and implementation of software and hardware to meet operational requirements and lay the foundation for an electronic registry and case management system. Once the Tribunal's Rules of Practice and Procedure have been developed, the electronic registry and case management system will be implemented in a manner that is consistent with the Rules of Practice and Procedure.

In its work, the Registry has been very mindful of the unique mandate of the Specific Claims Tribunal and its objective of timely resolution of longstanding historical grievances of First Nations across Canada. It has worked hard to engage and inform key stakeholders - including First Nations organizations, legal practitioners, provincial and federal departmental partners, and the judiciary - on its progress and direction, through regular meetings, conferences, and information sessions and through use of the Registry's Website and communications materials. The Registry has participated in Aboriginal litigation conferences and stakeholder meetings to get information and advice on how best to proceed in setting up Registry services to support the Tribunal and it has done significant research to support the work of the interim Tribunal.

Although a great deal of work remains to be done, much has been accomplished. The Registry is pleased with the progress made toward implementation of leading edge court practices and technology to create a capable and cost effective electronic registry and case management system and a Multipurpose Tribunal Room which can act as the electronic hub for the administration of Tribunal proceedings wherever they may take place across Canada. The Multipurpose Tribunal Room also incorporates cultural elements from First Nations cultures and, in doing so, will serve as a concrete symbol of the unique mandate of the Tribunal and the commitment of the parties who created it. In the days ahead, the Registry will continue to make special efforts to keep stakeholders well informed of developments at the Tribunal through use of the Registry's Website, communications materials, meetings and presentations.

Lessons Learned

The Registry has benefited from advice and support from other adjudicative tribunal and court services and from the various stakeholders involved in the creation of the Tribunal. The introduction of best practices from other organizations and the leveraging of resources through the effective use of technology and service agreements has made it possible for the Registry to put certain key elements in place efficiently.

Some uncertainty and delays to the development and implementation of Registry operations have been encountered. However, the Registry continues to make significant progress. Work that is underway can be adapted to requirements once the Tribunal has finalized the Rules of Practice and Procedure and there is greater certainty respecting the conduct of case management activities and hearings and decisions respecting location and composition of the Tribunal.
